Why is my child in detention?

Youth detention centres are established under the Youth Justice Act 1992 to:

- protect the safety of the community
- provide consequences for offending
- prepare detained young people to live productively in the community.

Your child has been sent to a youth detention centre because they are on remand (waiting to go to court) or have been sentenced.

Remand

A court or police watchhouse manager may have remanded your child in custody. Your child must stay in detention until they go to court. You can talk to your child's caseworker or lawyer to see if bail is an option.

Sentenced

A court may have sentenced your child to a detention order. This means your child has been found guilty and the court said they must spend a certain amount of time in a youth detention centre.

If you or your child believe the decision the court made was wrong, you can ask to have the decision reviewed or appealed. Talk to your child's caseworker or lawyer to find out how.

Can I visit my child at the youth detention centre?

We encourage you to visit your child while they are in detention. Contact the centre where your child is staying to arrange a visit.

Each centre has set visiting times but you can make special arrangements if you cannot visit during these hours.

Everyone entering a detention centre must pass a security check.

You cannot bring food or gifts to your child, or banned items like cigarettes or drugs.

At Brisbane Youth Detention Centre, you can buy food and drinks at the vending machines in visits.

Our visits staff can answer any questions you have about visiting your child.

They will talk to you about rules on how to dress when you visit.

They will also tell you about items that can't come into the centre. We have lockers where you can store these things.

If you live a long way from the centre, you can ask for support to travel to visit your child or you can ask for a video call with your child.

Who else can visit my child?

Family, friends (children must be accompanied by an adult) and community members, like Elders, can also ask to visit your child.

Can I send letters to my child in a youth detention centre?

You can send as many letters to your child as you like. Staff at the centre check all letters before children receive them.

Staff also check letters your child sends to you. They will remove any restricted or inappropriate material.

Staff won't check letters to or from your child's lawyer. If you have any questions about mail contact your child's caseworker.

Can I phone my child in a youth detention centre?

All phone calls that the centre receives for young people will be referred to a caseworker, team leader or shift supervisor. You may leave a message for your child to phone you back at a convenient time.

Your child is allowed 120 minutes of phone time each week to talk to approved people. The caseworker will speak with you and decide who will be approved on your child's phone list. Your child's caseworker will tell you of any restrictions on who can talk to your child.

Your child can also speak to their lawyer, case worker or the community visitor. These calls have no time limit and don't count toward their 120 minutes.

If you have to tell your child something that may upset them, let the staff know so that they can support your child.

Who can I talk to about my child while they are in detention?

When your child is admitted to the centre, they will be given a caseworker who will contact you. They will also have a caseworker from a Youth Justice service centre.

Your child's caseworkers are the best people to talk to about your child's progress in detention.

The caseworkers will talk to you about your child's case plan. The case plan identifies things that may have contributed to their offending behaviour. The case plan also identified activities for your child to do, to help them to develop skills to reduce their risk of reoffending. We will consider your child's view when developing their case plan.

Will my child be looked after?

Your child will be treated with respect and dignity at all times. They will be encouraged to treat others with respect and dignity also.

We will provide everything your child needs including:

- meals
- clothing
- shoes
- bedding
- toiletries
- books for school.

They can have some things sent to the centre, like family photos and their own clothes to wear to court.

Your child will have their own room if possible. The room has a bed, toilet, shower, desk and shelf. Your child is safe in their room. There are times during the day and night when they will be locked in their room.

Health services are provided at the centre 24 hours a day, seven days a week. You can talk to the health staff at the centre if you have concerns about your child's health.

Staff who work at the centre to help with your child's health include:

- nurses
- doctors
- psychologists
- speech and language pathologists.

The centre also organises visits with a psychiatrist, dentist, optometrist, counselor or any other medical professional needed.

Who will support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children?

Brisbane Youth Detention Centre and Cleveland Youth Detention Centre each have a cultural unit with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff who provide support to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children who are in detention. The cultural unit also helps other staff to understand the best way to look after your child.

West Moreton Youth Detention Centre has cultural officers who provide support to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children.

Elders from communities that the young people usually live in, work with our staff and may also visit the centre.

Can I give my child money?

If you bring or send money for your child, we put it in a trust account for them.

Your child will receive a weekly allowance of $6.40 from the government, (jointly funded by Commonwealth and State Governments).

You can direct deposit money for your child, using the details for the centre they are at:

Brisbane Youth Detention Centre/ West Moreton Youth Detention Centre
Bank	Commonwealth Bank

BSB	064817
Account	00916724
Account name	Cleveland Youth Detention Centre Trust Account
Reference	(your child's name)

We will return any money in your child's trust account to them when they are released.

Incentives and rewards

Young people have access to rewards and buy ups for positive behaviour. This helps young people set and work towards goals through their behaviour.

They can also take these items home when they leave.

Buy up items may include:

- snacks
- hygiene products
- magazines
- playing cards
- photo albums.

How is my child expected to behave in detention?

While in detention, your child is expected to:

- respect others
- follow reasonable instructions
- perform section duties
- go to school and programs
- have good manners
- look after their hygiene
- go to bed at bedtime
- not smoke
- not swear
- not graffiti
- not have inappropriate physical contact with other young people.

Any undesirable behaviour will be managed in an appropriate and consistent manner.

What will my child do each day?

Your child will attend school at the centre and participate in education and training programs.

Your child may do programs to help them not break the law.

They will also be involved in cultural, sporting and recreational activities.

What about temporary leave?

Your child may be given leave from the centre to attend:

- significant family events (such as funerals)
- medical appointments
- education and pre-employment appointments.

The centre director must approve any leave. Leave will only be given if staff assess your child will follow the conditions of their leave and their behaviour in detention has been stable.

If your child does not follow the conditions, the leave may be cancelled and your child will be returned to the centre immediately.

What if my child needs to go to court while in detention?

Your child may need to leave the centre to go to court or may participate in a video conference.

They can wear their own clothes to court.

Parents are required to attend court with their child. If you have any concerns with this, please speak with your child's Youth Justice service centre caseworker.

What if my child or I have a complaint?

Your child can make a complaint about anything at the centre. You can also make a complaint for them.

Your child won't get into trouble because a complaint is made.

You can talk to any youth detention staff member to make a complaint.

If your child wants to make a complaint, they can:

- fill out a complaint form and give it to a youth detention staff member
- talk to a youth detention staff member about their complaint
- fill out a complaint form and give it to a youth detention staff member to send to the police (if it is about something that might be a criminal offence)

- phone the Office of the Public Guardian on 1300 653 187 from the phone in their unit
- talk to the community visitor when they visit the centre
- leave a message for the community visitor (from the Office of the Public Guardian) in the communication box in their unit.

Complaints are taken seriously and will be kept confidential, although a few people will need to know about it so it can be investigated.

You can call the centre at any time to ask for an update on the complaint.

If you're not happy with the outcome of your complaint, you can also contact the:

- Queensland Ombudsman on 1800 068 908
- Human Rights Commission on 1300 130 670.

Will my child be safe?

We will do everything possible to ensure your child is safe and secure while in detention.

We do not tolerate inappropriate behaviour, sexual harassment and discrimination in youth detention centres.

Body worn cameras and CCTV cameras are used in the centre. Audio and video footage is recorded. Centre staff will warn people before they press record on a body worn camera.

Only some staff can watch the video and we will only share it with another person if the law tells us to. CCTV and body worn camera recordings may be used as evidence, this is to keep everyone safe.

You can contact the centre about any concerns.

A caseworker will contact you if anything happens to your child.
